Doctors petition SC against ban on surrogacy

Bhadra Sinha

NEW DELHI: A group of doctors has come up in support of commercial surrogacy, saying it has improved the economic condition of surrogate mothers, besides being a boon for hundreds of childless couples. The Indian Society for Assisted Reproduction (ISAR) has moved an application before the Supreme Court asking it not to quash a notification under which trading of "human embryo" is allowed. In the absence of a legislation to regulate surrogacy, doctors and couples wanting surrogate children take refuge under the 2013 notification. "There are hundreds of surrogates who have started their own small-scale businesses like catering, beauty parlours, food joints and sewing coaching classes. They now own houses, their children study in English medium schools, their husbands have bought passenger rickshaws, and their social status is markedly raised," the society stated. The petitioner claims to be a representative body of several scientists, doctors and research experts engaged in the field of assistive reproduction for childless couples. It has protested against advocate Jayashree Wad's petition asking the court to strike down the 2013 notification. Wad has contended that trading of human embryo under the Foreign Trade (Development and Regulations) Act is opposed to public policy, is unethical and violates the principle of doctrine of reasonableness. "Embryo is a life in the miniature form and cannot be considered as goods," Wad has contended. A bench headed by Justice Ranjan Gogoi posted the application for hearing to September 15 as it asked the Centre to file its response to Wad's petition. The court also asked the Medical Council of India (MCI) to file an affidavit on whether it was ethical for doctors to promote surrogacy.

LS passes first bill of session

ACTION SC/ST bill passed, demands of excess grants for Railways approved

NEW DELHI: The Lok Sabha passed the first bill of the disruption-hit monsoon session of Parliament on Tuesday with Opposition benches virtually empty due to the suspension of 25 Congress MPs which has worsened a bitter stand-off with the government.

The lower House passed the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Amendment Bill, 2014 and also approved demands of excess grants for the Railways.

Since the session commenced on July 21, Parliament has transacted little business as an aggressive Congress-led Opposition repeatedly obstructed proceedings, demanding the resignations of top BJP leaders over the Lalit Modi controversy and the Vyapam scam.

The SC/ST bill adds new categories of actions to be treated as offences against SC/STs and amends existing norms while establishing exclusive special courts to try offences under the act.

Replying to a debate on the bill, social justice and empowerment minister Thawar Chand Gehlot said the amendments would provide stronger punitive measures in cases of SC/ST atrocities. "Several steps have been taken by the NDA government in the last one year to prevent SC/ST atrocities and to rehabilitate them".

Moving for the passage of the demands for excess grants totalling ₹2,719 crore relating to the 2012-13 period, railways minister Suresh Prabhudatta said the matter related to the then UPA government and not to the NDA regime. The demands were later approved by a voice vote.

Prabhudatta also hit out at the Opposition, saying the NDA government did not "believe in politics".

"We believe in the smooth functioning of Parliament. Everything is subservient to national interest. The Modi government believes in the highest principles of democratic functioning", he said.

Referring to the ambitious bullet train plan, the railways minister said the project would not come at the expense of the services for the common man. "The Japan International Cooperation Agency has just submitted a feasibility report. We are evaluating the viability of the project", he said.

Cong stand reflects inability to bear Modi's success, says BJP

NEW DELHI: The BJP accused the Congress on Tuesday of adopting a "narrow-minded, partisan, obstructionist and anti-development" approach as it taunted the principal opposition party for not being able to accept the Narendra Modi government's success.

The ruling party stepped up its counter attack a day after 25 Congress MPs were suspended from the Lok Sabha for unruly behaviour. The Congress has been opposing various policies of the NDA government, especially the attempt to amend the land acquisition law passed by the UPA in 2013. The Congress was unable to bear its 2014 election defeat and, thus, resorting to negative tactics in Parliament by using its numerical strength in the Rajya Sabha, said a BJP resolution at its weekly parliamentary party meeting.

"The entire record of governance of the NDA government led by Narendra Modi is transparent, based upon probity and propriety and faster decision making in public interest without an iota of corruption," reads the resolution.

The Congress's stand would have serious and long-term adverse consequences for the country and affect the NDA government's efforts to build a resurgent India, the BJP said.

The party resolution listed some of the key bills such as the good and services tax (GST) that is awaiting Parliament's nod and putting in place a real estate regulator for protecting interests of consumers.

The BJP is under pressure to wriggle out of the current parliamentary stalemate to push its reforms agenda, a key promise made during the 2014 elections.

In major climb down, govt open to changes in land bill

NEW DELHI: The government said on Tuesday it was open to all changes in a controversial land bill on which a consensus existed as a parliamentary panel prepared to drop contentious provisions amid fears the legislation would adversely affect the BJP's poll prospects.

In a major climb down, rural development minister Birendra Singh said the NDA government maintained it wouldn't object to good suggestions from any institution, political party or farmers. His comments came a day after BJP legislators joined Opposition members to recommend 12 of 15 key amendments to the new land bill be dropped, virtually asking the Centre to restore the UPA's land laws. "We, too, must consider the issues on which there has been a consensus because a joint parliamentary committee is after all considered a mini Parliament. If there are dissent notes, we will examine what are the suggestions," Singh told reporters.

The minister said the government's stand would be known after August 7, when the panel submitted its report. The panel couldn't meet on Tuesday due to an Opposition boycott and will meet on August 10 next.

The NDA government brought sweeping changes to the UPA's land laws in December through an ordinance that was re-promulgated twice but the showpiece reform legislation ran into a groundswell of Opposition with Congress members calling it "anti-farmer". But fears of a farmer backlash in the upcoming Bihar polls are what may have compelled the government to backtrack on the showpiece legislation. Many BJP MPs from Uttar Pradesh told the party leadership the contentious legislation could cost the party dear in the 2017 assembly elections. The climb-down also came after a study revealed central ministries didn't make a single acquisition bid under the land ordinance this year.

NEW DELHI: Lok Sabha Speaker Sumitra Mahajan is expected to soon take a call on a complaint by five women MPs accusing BJP MP Ramesh Bidhuri of using abusive and sexist remarks.

The five MPs — Ranjeet Ranjan, Sushmita Dev (both Congress), Supriya Sule (NCP), Arpita Ghosh (Trinamool Congress) and PK Sreemathi Teacher (CPM) — alleged that Bidhuri abused them during the pandemonium in the House following the suspension of 25 Congress MPs on Monday.

An official in the Lok Sabha secretariat said there was no written complaint by the women MPs but they met the Speaker and informed her about Bidhuri's "repeated unruly behaviour" in the House. "She will take a call within a day or two," he said.

Ranjeet later claimed that Bidhuri has used offensive language against her on many occasions in previous sessions too.

Devalged that the BJP MP was in the "habit of using sexist and offensive" language. "The Speaker has assured us that she will take up the issue with Bidhuri," she said. The BJP MP, however, rejected the allegations. HTC

Legal opinion to decide defence deal

Rahul Singh
rahul.singh@hindustantimes.com

NEW DELHI: A crucial opinion from the law ministry will determine if the government can award a military contract to the subsidiary of a banned defence conglomerate. The advice could also shape an overarching principle for future deals. Italian defence giant Finmeccanica's subsidiary Whitehead Alenia Sistemi Subacquee (WASS) emerged as the lowest bidder for a contract to supply heavyweight torpedoes for the Navy's Scorpene submarines, the first of which is likely to get commissioned in September 2016.

The Scorpene trials will not be affected by the acquisition of Black Shark torpedoes. We will use the German SUT torpedoes for the trials.

A SENIOR GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL

India had last year banned Finmeccanica from taking part in future military tenders after its UK-based subsidiary AgustaWestland faced bribery allegations in the ₹3,727-crore VVIP chopper deal. The deal with WASS was put on hold in July 2014. On Tuesday, defence minister Manohar Parrikar told Parliament that his ministry "has decided to seek opinion in the matter from the ministry of Government to dilute whistle-blower law

NEW DELHI: The government has decided to dilute the law to protect whistle-blowers as it kicked off its year-long sea trials in October. The amendments ignore the basic principle underlying a whistle-blower protection law; to give a person who has knowledge of a wrongdoing in a public authority, said Venkatesh Nayak of the Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative.

Nayak said the proposed amendments would make it impossible for a citizen to blow the whistle, pointing that there were also provisions that barred any probe into a complaint unless the department concerned certified that it did not contain any classified information. HTC
